

Mother Gives Luncheon for Elinor Stewart

Debutante Is Honor Guest at an Assemblage That Includes a Large Number of This Year's 'Buds'

Eighty Gather at Tables Sweetpeas and Roses of Pinkish Hue Are Used in Scheme of Decoration

Miss Elinor C. Stewart, the debutante daughter of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of 800 Park Avenue, was the guest of honor at the largest luncheon of the autumn given yesterday in the crystal room of the Ritz-Carlton by her mother. The guests numbered about eighty and included many of this year's "buds" and some of last year's girls. They were seated at small tables, decorated with sweetpeas and pink roses.

In the party were Miss Dorothy Achelis, Miss Marjorie Andrews, Miss Elizabeth Andrade, Miss Lelia and Miss Ruth Baldwin, Miss Constance Banks,

PUTNAM BOOKS AND AUTHORS

"Mr. Hughes prevails not merely by his virtue, but by his intelligence. He is the best mind in Washington." So says the anonymous author of "The Mirrors of Washington."

So say we all.

How especially interesting just now is "The Mirrors of Washington" with its characters standing so vividly before the world.

The description of Balfour in "The Mirrors of Washington" is an epic. . . . Those dozen pictures of British leaders are inimitable.

"The grandmother of the flapper."

What a characterization!

In "The Glass of Fashion" the Gentleman with the Duster calls Margot Anghart. Her description of her and Col. Repington are more pithy than polite. . . . but gorgeous reading.

Three unequalled books, these, for Christmas reading and giving. The Glass of Fashion. The Mirrors of Washington. The Glass of Fashion. (each $2.50)

We have said before that Privilege is a great novel. We say it again.

Tomorrow we sail for England. The man we most want to meet there is Michael Sadler, who wrote Privilege. . . .

And then, of course, we are persistently enthusiastic about Erik Dorn
by Ben Hecht of Chicago. The Times call it "a genuine literary event." It is.

By the way, "The Complete Opera Book" by Kobbe is pre-eminent in its field. A perfect gift for music lovers. The story of 400 operas; 1,000 pages; 100 illustrations, $5.00.

We've just published two plays which are quite as worth having in your library as they are worth seeing.

Whether or not you agree with Mr. Vandenberg that Alexander Hamilton merits the superlative, the book itself you will find superlatively worth reading. ($2.50)

Yes, the New York Herald was right when it said that "The Leather Pushers" has "more laughs than the Woolworth Building has steps." . . . H. C. Wirer has written nothing funnier than this gorgeous slangy yarn about boxing.

"Calendar" Will Record Activities of the "Buds"

The Debutante Association, made up of girls who are members of the Junior League, has been formed for the purpose of publishing "The Calendar," a magazine devoted to debutantes and their activities. It is to be for private circulation only and the proceeds are to be devoted to the support of a playground for the children in a crowded section of the city. Miss Anne Gordon Winchester is secretary.

Dr. and Mrs. George Stuart Willis, of 116 East Fifty-third Street, formerly of Morrisania, N. J., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Glenna A. Willis, to Howard Douglas Hadden, Mr. Hadden is son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard S. Hadden, of 248 Henry Street, Brooklyn, and a grandson of Crowell Hadden, president of the Brooklyn Savings Bank. Mr. Hadden was graduated from Yale, class of 1910. The date has been set for the wedding.

Another engagement just made known is that of Miss Beatrice Adrienne Throckmorton, daughter of Mrs. Isabel B. Throckmorton, of Elizabeth, N. J., to Rafael Ramon Govin Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Govin, of 230 Massachusetts Avenue, Washington.

Miss Emily Kent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Kent, of this city, will be married to Washington Platt on December 8 in New York.

Society Members To Be Rummage Saleswomen

A rummage sale for the benefit of St. Vincent Ferrer Day Nursery will be held next Monday and Tuesday at 775 Lexington Avenue, with society members acting as saleswomen. The nursery is at 209 East Seventy-first Street, and the articles to be sold include gowns, hats, hosiery and articles for everyday use.

The officers and board of managers have charged the sale of Mrs. John Beverly Duer, president, and the following vice-presidents: Mrs. John D. Agar, Mrs. Alfred Chapin and Mrs. Jacob L. Phillips. The treasurer and secretary are Mrs. Cornelius N. Tiers and Mrs. J. Walter Wood respectively.

Birth Control Appeal Fails to Move Enright

Protection Request for Police at Meeting Tonight at Park Theater, but Will Probe Sunday's Raid

Backers Hire Detectives Undesirables and Children To Be Barred at Door by Officials of the League

Police Commissioner Enright replied yesterday to the letter of the birth control advocates asking for police protection at their meeting at the Park Theater to-night, but did not promise them the protection desired. The reply was addressed to Robert McCurdy Marsh, counsel of the Birth Control League, and said only:

"Your letter of the 15th instant at hand. The action taken by the police in connection with the meeting at the Town Hall on November 13, 1921, will be investigated, appropriate action taken and all concerned will be notified accordingly. Very truly yours, "R. E. ENRIGHT, "Police Commissioner."

Mr. Marsh immediately wrote another letter renewing the request for police protection, saying in part:

"While you do not answer my request for such assurance or even promise any answer in the future and refer only to an investigation of the action taken by the police last Sunday evening at the Town Hall, possibly you intend your statement 'that all concerned will be notified' to imply that I renew my request for prompt assurance against unlawful police interference at Friday's meeting."

Large Attendance Expected

"Instead of being held in Bryant Hall, as stated by my former letter, the meeting on Friday will be held at the Park Theater, Columbus Circle. This auditorium has a larger seating capacity, and better entrance, and the change has seemed desirable on account of the large attendance expected."

"Let me repeat that the persons arranging the meeting rely upon the police to prevent interruption from any source, whether from those in authority or from any kind of mob, and we are glad to co-operate to the fullest extent in seeing that the laws are complied with. My telephone number is Rector 4428."

In view of the possibility that there may be no police in attendance at the meeting to-night, the Birth Control League has engaged ten private detectives, who will be stationed within the hall and will maintain a strict watch for potential disturbers of the meeting. All members of the league and friends who have obtained tickets have been warned to permit themselves no demonstration of any kind, and to be quiet and to observe the most perfect order.

Officials of the league will likewise be stationed at the door to see that no children are admitted or persons whose motives in attending are obviously undesirable.

Mrs. Sanger Promises Dignity

"Everything possible will be done by the Birth Control League to make the meeting pass off with the dignity and quiet which characterized all our deliberations until the police made them sensational," said Mrs. Margaret Sanger.

Harold Cox, former member of the British Parliament, will deliver his speech on the relation of the birth control to the protection against future wars. Mrs. Sanger will speak on "British Control: Is It Moral?" Copies of Mrs. Sanger's speech will be given to the press in the afternoon, so that in the evening the public may judge for itself whether the meeting was in violation of the law.

Hadley's New Tone Poem Is Philharmonic Feature

A home-brewed novelty, "The Ocean," a tone poem by Henry Hadley, was performed for the first time at yesterday evening's Philharmonic concert at Carnegie Hall. It is based, according to the program, on an "Ocean Ode" by Louis K. Anspacher, and falls into parts, or moods, consisting of a prelude, a storm, a calm, a sea-sprite motif, which is the nearest approach to a tune in the whole work. It gives way to "the ocean flowing on through eternity," theme begun on a solo horn and developed to a climax, which fades in a quiet close.

"The Ocean" was interesting and dramatic, picturing its subject without the aid of any kind of "sea-sprite" motif, which is the nearest approach to a tune in the whole work. It gives way to "the ocean flowing on through eternity," theme begun on a solo horn and developed to a climax, which fades in a quiet close.

Mr. Strinsky took the stand for the first time at the concert. He played the "Siegfried Idyll" and Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, of which the performance was dramatic, especially the second movement, which brought the most applause of the evening, calling the orchestra to its feet.

Galli-Curci Sings in "Lucia di Lammermoor"

Handsome Production Given at Metropolitan; Gigli, Danise and Mardones in Cast

Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor" presented itself as the third opera of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House last night, with a clean and shining morning face musically and handsome stage furnishings and costumes.

The title role was enacted by Mrs. Galli-Curci, who has been heard in it quite a number of times since she first sang it with the Chicago Opera Company in the Lexington Theater. Her Lucy is not a flawless performance from any point of view, but her dramatic and limpid and capable voice and sympathetic appearance convinced many of her shortcomings—all that can be condoned. She would be a perfect example of the art of song if she would but remain true to the sustained melodic line and to pitch. In the delivery of recitative she has learned much last night from her companion, Mr. Gigli, whose Edgardo is marked by the most amiable graces.

The impassioned Enrico was embodied by Mr. Danise, though one that ever got far from the Italian conventions. Mr. Mardones was appropriately the prima donna as those which used to threaten the rafters of the Lexington Theater and Manhattan Opera House.

Print Sale Brings $2,671

"Moon Gazer" From Sumitomo Collection Sells for $430

A Japanese color print by Harunobu, "The Moon Gazer," sold for $430 at the American Art Galleries during the sale of prints, which realized $2,671.50 last night. The prints were of William S. and John T. Spaulding, of St. Louis, representing duplicate impressions of a print while forming their world-renowned collection. Two hundred and fifty other examples were offered at the closing session of the sale to-night.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art acquired two specimens from the collection, paying $325.00 for each. These were "A Breezy Day," signed Koryusai, and a print by Shunsho, illustrating a tall woman in a field, with a standing figure in the background. Charles H. Pepper paid $100 for a rare impression by Hiroshige, signed "Frederick W. Gookin collection called 'A Shower at Shono.'" This is one of a famous series of prints, signed by a tree-bordered road with a full moon shining through the branches; No. 25, of the same series, was obtained by F. W. Gookin for $125.00. The sale total for the first two sessions is $5,266.50.

Grosscup's Last Will Sought in Liverpool

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—A petition asking the appointment of Kathryn Grosscup Moon and Benjamin Grosscup Jr. as executors of the estate of Peter S. Grosscup, former judge of the United States Circuit Court, who died on board the steamship Caronia October 1, was filed here to-day. The petition shows that the grosscup left an estate of $200,000, while the will, drawn in New York in March, 1913, disposes of about $500,000.

At the time the will was filed Mrs. Moon, adopted daughter, expressed the belief that a later will had been drawn and would be found among the effects Judge Grosscup had taken on to England. These effects, according to attorneys to-day, are now held in bond in Liverpool and may reveal other properties.

The will bequeathed $400,000 to Mrs. Moon, Marshall Grosscup Samsell and David Sylvester Samsell, of Chicago, and gave $100,000 each, as was the public library at Pondville, Ohio.

Widow of Mark Hanna Dies at Washington Home

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Mrs. Mark A. Hanna, widow of former Senator Marcus Alonzo Hanna, died at her residence here to-night.

Mrs. Hanna's maiden name was Augusta Rhodes. Her father was the late Daniel P. Rhodes, one of the earliest business men of Cleveland, Ohio, who and steel trade and became a power of national wide interests. Mrs. Hanna was his only surviving daughter.

Mrs. Hanna was the mother of Daniel R. Hanna, who died two weeks ago, and Ruth Hanna McCormick, wife of Senator Medill McCormick, of Illinois.

J. B. Bogart, City Editor Of the Old "Sun," Dies

John B. Bogart, who was city editor of "The Sun" when Charles A. Dana was its editor, died Wednesday from diabetes at his home, 181 West Eighty-seventh Street, New York City, at about twenty-four hours, after seventy-six years old. He is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters.

As city editor of "The Sun" Mr. Bogart developed a brilliant and versatile staff. Many of the men who got their training under him became well known as writers. He was the first to have his office in Brooklyn. At one time he was a member of the New York State Dental Examiners Board. He was a father of the "Sun" and the "Sun" was a father of him.

His daughter, Miss Amelia Jarvie, funeral services will be held to-morrow in the house where he died.

Birth, Engagement, Marriage, Death and In Memoriam Notices may be telephoned to The Tribune any time up to midnight for insertion in the next day's paper. Telephone Beckman 3000.

He was a native of Boston and had lived in Peekskill for many years. He is survived by his wife and three children. No arrangements have been made for the funeral.

Charles T. Hudson, Jefferson Davis's Captor, Dead at 83

Civil War Colonel Insisted President of Confederacy Was Fleeing in Woman's Garb When He Caught Him

Charles Tracy Hudson, captor of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, and sturdy supporter of the story that Davis was disguised as a woman when taken, died yesterday at his home, 275 Hemlock Street, Brooklyn.

Mr. Hudson, who was breveted colonel for his services at the close of the war, held the rank of captain when Lee surrendered. Davis at that time was making his way across Georgia with a few friends with the intention of losing himself in the uninhabited region of the South.

He turned back, however, owing to the receipt of news that his wife was seriously ill. Information of where he was, however, reached Federal officers in Georgia and Captain Hudson was sent to take him prisoner.

With fourteen men of his regiment, the 4th Michigan Cavalry, Captain Hudson followed Davis to the town of Irwinville, where the secessionist President lay hidden. Captain Hudson and one of his men, as he told the story later, were the first to be confronted by Mrs. Davis.

Mrs. Davis, Colonel Hudson said, told them quite haughtily that there were only women in the house, that one of the women was her sister. Under circumstances were such that the intrusion of strange men, let alone men in military uniforms, could only be a bit of a shock to her.

While she was talking, according to Colonel Hudson, one of the men on guard gave a warning yell and at the same time a shawl emerged from the back door. In spite of the feminine dress, Colonel Hudson said, the fugitive was a man, and he was taken.

He intercepted the fleeing man, tore the shawl from his head and revealed the feature of Davis.

He himself always denied that he was in disguise when he captured Davis. He has been inclined to discredit the story that he was.

Mr. Hudson, however, always maintained that Davis was trying to make his escape disguised as a woman when he was captured, and his son, Charles Tracy Hudson Jr., exhibited last night a bit of a "show" which, he said, was part of the shawl worn by Davis on that occasion. His father had obtained it, he said, after Davis had been taken to Fortress Monroe.

A piece of the original fragment had been torn off by his father, he said, and sent to Colonel Roosevelt at the time that one of Colonel Hudson's four sons was christened Clinton Roosevelt Hudson.

Colonel Hudson was born in Berlin, N. Y., May 6, 1838. He enlisted in the 4th Michigan Cavalry in 1862. He was a member of the 1st Cavalry, 1st Division, and in various engagements had three horses shot under him.

Vice-Chancellor Peck Of Syracuse U. Is Dead Succumbs to Heart Disease at Age of 58; Had Been Regarded as Day's Successor

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 17.—Henry Allen Peck, vice-chancellor of Syracuse University, died at his home, 159 Union Street, Syracuse, N. Y., to-day morning as a result of heart disease, which had confined him to his bed since Sunday.

Vice-Chancellor Peck was born in 1863 in Chicago, Oswego County, N. Y. He was graduated from Syracuse University and took up his duties as an instructor in the institution at the age of twenty-three. He was associated with the university continuously since that time.

He had been dean of the College of Liberal Arts for several years before being elevated
